Cold air was in place in Arkansas on the 13th. During the early morning hours, an area of low pressure moved eastward across the state, setting off a band of light snow and sleet. Accumulations were less than half an inch, but even this small amount was sufficient to cause hazardous driving conditions on bridges, overpasses, and elevated roadways, primarily from central into eastern Arkansas. Even parts of southern Arkansas received some light sleet and snow, but no problems were attributed to the wintry precipitation. It was unusually early in the season for winter weather in Arkansas. It was the third earliest measurable snowfall on record in Little Rock. One indirect fatality occurred in Pulaski County near the dividing line between the North Little Rock and Sherwood city limits due to a traffic accident on an icy bridge.

The arrival of an Arctic cold front brought winter weather to northern Arkansas and parts of the Ouachita Mountain region from the afternoon of the 17th into the wee hours of the 18th. Cold rain began changing to a mixture of sleet and snow during the afternoon of the 17th, followed by a quick changeover to all snow. The snow exited the Little Rock County Warning Area well before dawn on the 18th. Most snowfall amounts were in the 1/2 to 2 inch range, but there were isolated totals of 3 to 4 inches.
